KHARAI

The name Kharai is derived from the pan which is very similar to the wok and has been used for many centuries to prepare this traditional style of cooking. A generous portion of lamb, chicken, prawn, vegetables or seafood is cooked in a thick blend of succulent sauce flared in the Kharai. This dish is highly recommended to curry connoisseurs.

DHANSAK

Originating from Persia, a mild dish yet it derives a piquant richness from its blend of spiced oil with garlic, mashed pineapple and lentils which belies the apparent confusion of its ingredients. For the spice addicts please ask to serve at a higher spice rating.

ROGAN JOSH

Here the characteristics of the dish is delivered from the use of tomatoes and onions fried in special oil.

KORMA (SWEET)

A preparation of mild spices with milk and yogurt is used to create a delicate flavour with a creamy texture. Ground almonds, coconut and sultanas are used in this dish.

BALTI

The literal meaning of this dish is 'Bucket' and it originates from Birmingham! A very nice dish with an array of flavours tangy, sweet and a little spice.

CEYLON

A very spicy and hot saucy curry made with whole okras. Hot with a tangy flavour.

If you have any intolerances or dietary requirements please advise our staff when ordering.
